In conversing with the Judge, who was for a long time President of the City Council, he signified his readiness to continue the collection of the rents and pay the whole amount as collected into the City Treasury, without charging one cent for future services for such duty. The services of a trustworthy and methodical man like him would be an acquisition worthy of acceptance by the Finance Committee of Council. He is familiar with the contracts and the tenants, and proffers this free service, as alleged, for the interest he feels in the city business and economy of this School
